SHAEFER BAKERY DESTROYED BY FIRE

At An Early Hour This Morning—
Heavy Loss Is Covered by Insurance.

CAKES, BREAD AND BUNS BURN

They Were Ready for the Saturday
Trade—Mr. Schaefer Expects to Rebuild.

George Schaefer's bakery, located near the south end of Carter street and at the rear of his South Chestnut street home, was burned at an early hour this morning. The loss was quite heavy, but is covered by insurance.

The blaze was first discovered about 1:30 by Mrs. Ahlbrand, a neighbor of Mr. Schaefer, and the latter was notified. The fire company arrived about 2 o'clock and worked for nearly two hours before the fire was extinguished.

The building was a large one-story frame structure, consisting of several rooms, the dimensions of the main room being 20 x 70 feet. One section of the building was new. Some of the walls were left standing, but were so badly burned that the building is practically a total loss. Mr. Schaefer believes the machinery is ruined and the big $1,500 brick oven is very badly damaged. A considerable amount of flour and other stock was destroyed.

Friday night the baking was done for the Saturday trade. The bakers completed their work about midnight. A large number of cakes of all kinds, 864 loaves of bread and 1,200 buns had been baked and were all destroyed. Eight out-of-town customers who expected early morning shipments are out of stock for Saturday's trade.

Had the wind not been in the right direction, buildings near the bakery would have been destroyed. It is not known what caused the fire, but it is thought it started near the ovens.

Mr. Schaefer estimates that the cost of the bakery buildings, oven, machinery and stock was about $12,500. He carried $7,400 insurance, which will cover the loss. He expects to rebuild, the new building to be of brick.

Work on the court house is progressing slowly, although it is believed that the work will advance more rapidly from this time. The contractor desires to enclose the building before winter, so that the interior work may be done during the cold weather. The stone for the building will be on the ground in a short time. Superintendent Albert Luedtke, who has supervision of the improvement, says that the work is being well done and that an excellent foundation has been made.

CASE DISMISSED

Drug Clerk Not Required to Answer to Manslaughter Charge.

Herman J. Fritz, the drug clerk at Indianapolis whose mistake in a sale resulted in the death of George Salmon, formerly of Seymour, was arraigned in the police court Friday on a charge of manslaughter, and was discharged by the judge. The case was dismissed upon the recommendation of the cononer.

The communication from the cononer who had investigated the case, stated that he found that Salmon was accidentally poisoned August 28, and died at St. Vincent's hospital September 3. He continues:

"I feel that this is a very pathetic case, both to the widow and the young man who sold the oxalic acid, mistaking it for crab orchard salts. I find that Herman Fritz is a licensed pharmacist of the state of Indiana and holds license No. 5709, and that he has complied with the laws by procuring said license, and that he violated no law in selling the acid.

"The only fault I can find in this case is really the fault of Herman Fritz's eyes, which were bad, and he had to wear dark glasses to protect them from the light, and wore dark glasses when he sold the acid. It is very unfortunate that this accident occurred, but it is an accident that is liable to occur to any pharmacist."

In his testimony Fritz shoulders all the blame for the death, admitting that Salmon's son, sent to the store for the salts, asked for the right article. Joseph P. Fritz, druggist, says in his testimony that Herman Fritz, the clerk, was suffering from poisoning of his eyes. Recently, he says also, the stock had been rearranged, and this may have aided in making the mistake possible.

School Announcement.

The morning session for grade pupils will extend from 8 to 12 o'clock; the afternoon session, from 12:30 to 4:30. All who are to be in the Shields building will attend the afternoon session at the Park and Laurel schools, in accordance with directions given in yesterday's and today's papers. Pupils belonging at the Park and Laurel will attend the morning session.

High School.

All pupils of the first, second, third and fourth years of the high school will meet Monday morning, September 12, at 9 o'clock, in Armory hall. At that time all notices concerning future sessions will be given.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors who assisted us during the fire and loss of our bakery plant; also the fire department for their heroic work in saving our other property as well as that of our neighbors.

Respectfully,

MR. & MRS. GEO. SCHAEFER.

NEW COMMANDRY INSTITUTED HERE

Excellent Lodge of Knights Templar
Organized in Seymour Friday Evening.

MANY VISITING KNIGHTS HERE

Order of the Temple Conferred upon Thirteen Candidates—Splendid Meeting.

The Seymour Commandry of Knights Templar was installed at the Masonic Temple Friday evening by the members of that order in this city and a large number of visiting Knights. The local commandry was organized under a dispensation several weeks ago, and the meeting Friday evening was awaited with much interest.

The new commandry includes not only Jackson county, but several adjoining counties. Formerly this county was in the district of the Columbus Commandry, and Masons in Seymour desiring this degree were required to file their applications with that Commandry. Some time ago it was suggested that a Commandry be installed here, and as the plan met with the approval of a large number of local Masons, arrangements were made to petition the Indiana Commandry for a lodge here. When the petition was filed there were already quite a number of Knight Templars living in Seymour and they were especially interested in the new lodge.

At the meeting Friday evening the order of the Temple was conferred upon thirteen candidates, who had previously received the preliminary degrees. A number of the members who received the degree were from Masonic lodges from the neighboring towns.

The new Commandry begins its work with bright prospects for a strong and active membership. A second class of candidates will be given the degree within a short time, and already a large number of new applicants have filed the petitions for membership.

When the Commandry was instituted a large number of visitors from other cities were present and witnessed the work. The Columbus Commandry was represented by the following Knight Templars: A. C. Denison, W. P. Keller, John Jewell, T. S. Fitzgibbon, Roy M. Jackson, Oliver Ong, George W. Robertson, George H. Denison, D. E. Lewellen, D. B. Snyder, W. F. Kendall, C. A. Reeves, W. N. Achenbach, L. J. Lehman, F. E. Morton, O. G. Price, C. M. Kellner, L. M. Guernsey and J. W. Berhman. There were also a number from Bedford, Aurora, Washington, Louisville and Indianapolis.

When you're ailing and don't know just what's the matter with you, the safest thing to take is Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea, both because it's the greatest all-round systemic regulator, and because it cannot work injury in any case, being purely vegetable. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. ## SEWER SYSTEM

At Bedford Investigated By J. S. Mills.

J. S. Mills, of Seymour, called on City Engineer Walter Malott this afternoon, seeking information in regard to our sanitary sewer system and especially the sewage disposal plant. According to Mr. Mills, Seymour is now permitting their sewage to flow into White river, and that it is now getting to a point where the city will have to make some other arrangements.

The local sewage plant has been much in the lime light until recently, because of suits brought against the city for alleged infringements on the Cameron sewage processes. There has been very little said in this regard for several months, the claims apparently having no foundation.

City Engineer Malott is familiar with the sewage disposal proposition in this city and can give his visitor some practical information.—Bedford Mail.

Mr. Mills who is taking his vacation went to Bedford to look over the sewage disposal plant there merely for his own information and satisfaction. The council is not contemplating the building of any plant here soon. It is only a matter of time however until such action is necessary. Sooner or later it is probable the legislature will pass a law to protect streams from pollution that will make the erection of sewage disposal plants in many cities necessary.

FAMILY REUNION.

Valentine Fox, of Greenfield, Drives

Valentine Fox, of Greenfield, arrived this morning for a short visit with relatives here. Arrangements were quickly made for a family dinner with his three children at the home of his brother, John Fox, on South Chestnut street. The children who were present were Mrs. John Mettert, her husband and children; James Fox and wife and Miss Maggie B. Fox. The day was spent very pleasantly together.

COUNTY COUNCIL COMPLETES WORK

Appropriations Made for the Maintenance of the Various Offices and Boards.

MONEY FOR BRIDGE REPAIR

Members of the Council Allow Less Amounts Than Many of the Officers Asked.

The Jackson county council completed its work, and the appropriations for the various departments of the county government have been made. Nearly all of the appropriations allowed were less than the amounts asked and in several cases the items were omitted altogether.

The ordinance appropriating the money provides that $5,000 shall be available for the purpose of bridge repair, besides $900 for the construction of new bridges.

On account of remodeling the court house, it was necessary to allow money for the rent of offices for the county officials. This is an appropriation which is seldom made in this county, as the court house is maintained for the various offices.

The appropriations which were made follow:

WORK AS A UNIVERSAL PANACEA

It Safeguards Health, Steadies the Mind, and Feeds the Flame of Hope.

I consider work one of the greatest blessings. I am not sure but that it is the greatest blessing, says Erman J. Ridgeway in The Delineator for September. I must think it is, for I recall now that I wrote four injunctions in my boy's Birthbook and work heads the list. Work keeps the body healthy, and the mind steady. When the heart is sick—work. When hope is dim—work. After failures, get up and work. Go at obstacles on the run. Tackle impossibilities hard. Measure today by last year, five years ago. If gaining, fine; work. If losing, too bad! work harder. Be glad that you have work to do. And if you haven't any definite work, find it quick, and get at it. If you have done your work, and earned leisure, and are not worn out, don't rust out. Travel; study; go in for community work; lend a hand; help somebody somewhere, somehow. That is living.

SYSTEMIC CATARRH.

One of many cases where Peruna has done what other remedies failed to do.

MR. C. A. LANDGRABE.

Mr. C. A. Landgrabe, Box 25, Coalburg, Ohio, writes: "I had been a slight sufferer for a number of years, but paid little or no attention to it, until the spring of this year, when my sufferings became very severe.

"I had pain in the head, back, spine, liver, chest, and various parts of my body, besides indigestion that caused me much trouble and anxiety. I often thought when I retired at night I would not live through it. I tried medical aid, but to no purpose.

"Not knowing what was my main trouble I wrote to Dr. Hartman, after reading of his treatment, for advice, telling him of my various ailments, and he notified me at once that I had systemic catarrh.

"After using the first bottle of Peruna I felt relief, so I continued to use it until I had taken four bottles, when I felt entirely cured. I recommend it to all others, believing that they will experience the relief that I did."

Peru-na as a Tonic.

Mr. William F. Hawkins, 12 West St., Westerly, R. I., writes:

"I wish to give my testimony in favor of Peru-na as a tonic. I have used the same for catarrh, and can recommend it to all who are troubled in that way."

As if it were not bad enough for the earth to fly up and hit aeroplanes, lightning has begun striking them.

What bald-headed man had hoped to live to see a flyless world? Yet that is what the scientists are planning.

Giddy New York regards the idea of closing its lobster palaces at 1 a. m. as very little better than a curfew law.

We wonder how one small cone can hold so many kinds of chemicals, and have room left for a nickel's worth of ice cream.

It costs $3,000,000 a day to run the national government. What will the government cost when aeroplaning is in fashion?

A Chicago man paid $300 for "mere bit of a meal." It probably was a steak with one overlying slice of breakfast bacon.

The government is turning out 3,000,000 postal cards a day, due to the summer resort season being in full blast, we presume.

United States certificates of merit to enlisted men are going largely to the cooks and musicians. Has no one a word for a soldier?

The Kaiser has been writing poetry to a party of German maidens who called upon him and took him chocolate. Incidentally, it is to be hoped the chocolate was better than the poetry.

One of the latest aeroplane accidents shows that it is bad to be in a flying machine hit by lightning, in the air. But where is being struck by lightning either comfortable or salubrious?

Some of New York's most wealthy and fashionable women are importing French aeroplanes and preparing to learn to aviate. Philadelphia women have taken the lead at Newport, and there seems to be nothing for the New York ladies to do but fly high around home.

IRENE'S BIG STICK

By INEZ DeJARNATT COOPER

Edgerton Wilson was the victim of his own dignity. From a child he had taken himself too seriously. As a young man it grew upon him, until he married; and then his wife also fell victim to it—so thought he, although he did not clothe the idea in those words.

But he was mistaken. His wife was one of the wise ones of the earth. She had not been married six months before she realized that a certain course must be pursued.

"It's entirely too bad," said she to Mrs. Ren Wilson, her sister-in-law, "that Edgerton should be spoiled in this manner. He is too good a man and it must be stopped. He has rare ability, else he could not hold the position that he does and he is considerate and kind. He is handsome, too, and all that. But he has no idea of humor, could not possibly see that there might be anything in his seriousness intensely amusing to others."

"Well, Irene," little Mrs. Ren sighed—she sometimes envied her capable sister-in-law, "I should think that you could bring him about if anything could."

"Indeed I can," said Irene, nodding a very well groomed head. "I think entirely too much of the real Edgerton to allow this superficial trait to mar our happiness."

This conversation took place on the first anniversary of their marriage and the third rolled around before Irene, to use her own expression, had her husband "right where she wanted him." The evening of that day Wilson brought home a lot of books on "Advanced Thought."

"We have been very happy, Irene," he explained fondly, "but, assuming a dignified air, 'it's time we took up our life's work. I have been thinking of this matter for several weeks past and feel sure that when you look into it, you will agree with me."

Irene picked up one of the volumes, de luxe edition, slender and dainty, and ran over the few pages: "The Unity of the Inner Life," she read. "Have you gone over this?"

"Know it by heart," replied he, pleased at her interest. "I always said you were a sensible little woman," he added, turning to his books.

"Well you might," said Irene with conviction. "And my sense will be the saving of you yet." But she did not utter these words aloud.

A week later, during which Wilson was pouring over his books on Advanced Thought, he came home with a thick volume entitled: "The Affinity of Soul Mates."

Irene said nothing. She had been sitting up and taking notice for three years and she was not surprised when her steady Edgerton rather shamefacedly put it away without showing it to her.

"Did you bring another book?" she asked with animation, when they sat down for an evening at home.

"Yes," he admitted guiltily. "One in the office loaned it to me."

The next day Irene spent largely in reading about affinities. The book was made up of the writings of several persons prominent in the cult and was especially pregnant with the utterances of one Sarah Johnson, who was a regular contributor likewise to the Advanced Thought Semi-Weekly, which now held a prominent place in their library.

The woman's writings were marked and underscored. Something, the reference to an incident in the woman's childhood, caused Irene to throw down the book in triumph.

"Could it be she?" she asked herself. One thing was certain—she would know. For a few moments she used the telephone and after waiting for a short time for the Advanced Thought people, she made an appointment to meet Sarah Johnson.

She and Sarah Johnson, though miles apart socially, had known each other as children. In fact, years ago Sarah's mother had been Irene's mother's cook and a very efficient one, at that. The girls had become acquainted through whispered conversations held various Saturdays in Mrs. Johnson's kitchen; for that woman brooked no noise in her orderly domain.

They had not met for years, and Irene, though not surprised that Sarah, who she had always secretly admired, should be doing anything well, was surprised at her line of work, the work which her husband had frequently underscored in the much thumbed magazines.

Admitted to the presence of the Advanced Thought writer, she recognized her at once.

"I came about the affinity talk, Sarah," said Irene by the way of coming to the point, after the greetings were over.

Sarah was glad to see the old acquaintance, but she was proud and she waited.

"You don't believe that twiddle any more than I do," said Irene bluntly.

"It says best," said Sarah. Irene elevated very straight and very dark brows. She had not had to think much about the paying part.

"I suppose that it does make some difference," she mused.

"Much," replied Sarah warmly. "I am getting a hold. I have worked at all manner of employment and this seems to be the only thing in which neither age, color, sex nor social standing makes a difference."

Irene was listening with her graceful head bent in thought. Presently she unfolded the plan to Sarah Johnson.

"I dare not offer you money, Sarah," she said, "any more than I dared offer to bribe you in the old days. But you see the trend of things and it means a lot to me. I ask you to do it as a favor—merely between friends—as when in the old days, you helped about the birds."

"And both were severely spanked for it," interrupted Sarah reminiscently.

"That is true," assented Irene. "Perhaps I ought not to lead you into this."

"I'll take my chances now as I did then," replied Sarah, and after thanking her, Irene departed.

Things went on for several weeks, until Irene knew that the time for the mating of her husband's soul had come, and she dismissed him with a smile, feeling rather Judas-like.

"It is too bad, too, poor boy," she said. "But he will come home completely cured, and would thank me, if he knew—which he never shall."

The last article from Sarah Johnson's pen had won a letter from Wilson. The article in question had been on the "Allness of the One." It was full of gold, so he told her, and she had replied in like coin. Now, after a month's correspondence, fervid in its intensity, he, with heart beating under his well-fitting coat, went to see the author of these epistles. He felt many qualms on going to this appointment, but he tried to smother them by "holding the thought" of Oneness.

Should the friendship be purely platonic, or should he divorce Irene, whom he still loved, despite the glamor of the other—and marry Sarah Johnson?

"It shall be just as Sarah says," he breathed. "Soul mates should do soul work together and nothing, however dear, should interfere."

Clearly from her letters, Sarah Johnson understood him as he had never been understood before, as he had longed to be understood when a child. Yes, it should be just as she said.

The hour for which the appointment was set was late, for Sarah Johnson was a busy woman. That night she was billed to speak at the Negro Woman's league—"How dear and kind of her," he apostrophized. Irene, with all her winsome ways would never have consented to mix so. Indeed, he himself, he had to confess, was fastidious to a degree. Ah, well, Sarah must teach him her broad ways.

He was at her door now, a modest home in Hoyne avenue. He rang the bell and a smart negro girl admitted him and went to summon her mistress. After waiting a moment, he heard a deep, melodious voice, such a voice—sweet toned and clear, as he had not dared to hope for.

"Mr. Edgerton Wilson, I believe," said the voice.

He turned at the sound of the mellow tones and encountered a woman of magnificent proportions. "I am Sarah Johnson," said the woman.

Wilson stared, gasped, and stared again. He shuddered and choked; and despoiling himself for a coward; tried to pull himself together. For though the voice was melodious, the form magnificent, the woman faultlessly attired, she was black—undeniably black.

"You thought I was white," said Sarah Johnson, her full lip curling slightly.

"Yes," said Wilson, recovering himself, "and I thought I was white myself, but I now see my mistake. I beg your pardon and I bid you good evening."

For an hour he paced the streets, trying to regain his composure and readjust his thoughts, but to no avail. Despite himself, he certainly did, for after all, he was a man, and not a cur. The scales dropped completely from his eyes; he allowed himself but one solace to his wounded, bleeding, dying self-esteem—Irene should never know!

Remaining away until the house should be quiet, he crept home at last; for the first time in his life he was without a latch key, wondering dully how it happened, not knowing that Irene, who had abstracted it from his pocket while he was guiltily kissing her in parting, had sat fingering it for an hour, before rising to admit someone who tapped softly at the basement entrance.

It was late before Wilson stood baffled, before his house. He found by investigation that he could creep indoors by way of the pantry window, which was some eight feet from the ground.

Raising himself with the help of a bit of woodbine, he gently pushed up the window and was presently head and shoulders in the room and was in the act of raising one knee to the sill with the intention of drawing up his whole body, when suddenly the window shut down on him with a force so unexpected and so painful that he cried for help, not knowing but that he would be crushed.

It was all stillness throughout the house, but in a moment he heard the beating of feet on the paved yard below and a second later found himself grasped hands and feet by invisible forces.

The force which held his feet was part of the police force, and a lusty patrolman was drawing him with no gentle hand, towards the ground. Held by strong arms above, he was on the point of thinking that his time had come; when out of the black chaos, flashed light the electric light of civilization; and revealed in it, stood Irene, with long flowing black hair, her eyes questioning and frightened, her child-like form enveloped in a crimson bath robe.

Blinking in the light, Wilson looked at the jailor of his upper portions, and beheld, to his unmitigated horror, a woman of color, decked in a red bandana and yellow kimona. Attired thus, no one but he—upon whom her features would always be indelibly impressed, could ever have recognized the dignified Sarah Johnson.

"Let him go, Sarah!" commanded Mrs. Wilson, whereupon Sarah relaxed the Herculean grasp and the bruised man fell on to the pavement below, and literally, as well as metaphorically, into the arms of the law.

Instantly the two women ran out to identify the chagrined and crushed man.

"You let him go, Mistah Policeman!" exclaimed Sarah, in tones of broadest African accent. "Dat's ma soul mate! Ain't you, honey?" she asked, addressing the drooping disciple of Advanced Thought.

"An' he," she continued, again addressing the policeman, with a sentimental leer, "come a seekin' ob his soul mate—a crawling on the wings ob—ob—on the wings of affinity!" concluded she triumphantly.

Wilson glanced down at his wings of affinity, brushed the dust from the knee of one of them, and tried to avoid Irene's eyes. Much to his relief, she was trying to explain matters to his captor, who departed.

The next evening he was sitting at his hearthside in a very honeymoon-like fashion, feeling rather silly and ill at ease, but cured.

"Rather good natured of your new cook," commenced he weakly, "to try to get me from the clutches of the policeman that way."

"Rather," assented Irene dryly. "I never interfere with your management of the house, Irene," he continued after a pause, "but I wish as a favor to me that you would never keep colored help. Just as a favor, you know."

"All right," agreed Irene affably. "And I've been thinking lately, that I haven't been half as interested as I ought to be in your line of thought. Shall I get out the books and have a cozy evening of research together?"

"You may burn the books," growled Wilson, leaning back with a sense of comfort and luxury, which he had not felt for months, in fact, since he had been chiefly occupied in holding the thought of the "Allness of the One."

"I'd be glad to be rid of them," he added reaching for the frivolous bejeweled little hand of his wife.

But Irene did not burn them. She carried them, instead, to a place of safety. "For," she argued, not unwisely, "I might want to use them sometime, as a Big Stick."

HOW TO LIVE TO BE 114

Captain Diamond of San Francisco Uses Olive Oil as Age Specific.

Possibly the oldest man in the United States is Capt. G. E. D. Diamond, now living in the Old People's home in San Francisco. He celebrated his one hundred and fourteenth birthday anniversary May 1, and confidently anticipates being "Johnny-on-the-spot" to greet Halley's comet when that tramp of the skies comes perambulating back this way 75 years hence. He has seen the celestial wanderer in two centuries and if he survives to see it again he will be well qualified to assure a nervous public that nothing untoward is going to happen.

Captain Diamond was born at Plymouth, Mass., May 1, 1796. He has a vivid recollection of the war of 1812, in which his father served. His first vote was cast in 1816, in the campaign that resulted in the election of James Monroe as president. He helped to build some of the first railroads in the United States, among them the road from Worcester to Boston, the Old Colony railroad from Boston to Plymouth and the railroad from Albany to Schenectady.

Before he was fifty, Captain Diamond was an old man, decrepit, rheumatic and plainly on the toboggan. A photograph of him taken at the time of the Civil war shows that he then looked older than he does today. It was at about that time that he evolved the dietetic theories (including the liberal use of olive oil, both internally and externally), to which he attributes his advanced age and perfect health. Diet and exercise, he believes, are the secrets of longevity; and if a man lives right and eats right he can see no reason why the machine should not be kept running indefinitely—perhaps—until even the record run made by old Methusalem himself is beaten to a frazzle.

Captain Diamond did not enlist in the Civil war, because he had ideas on the subject of personal liberty that would not have worked at all had he been in the army. However, he became a government agent connected with the transportation department, with headquarters in St. Louis. After the close of the war he engaged in the real estate business, until in 1873, when he drove overland from St. Louis to San Francisco, where he has made his home ever since.

Good Jokes

HOW HE WON OUT.

"Oh, George," she cried, in perplexed tones, "I'm afraid we must part."

"Part? Why must we part, dear?" he echoed.

"On account of father," she replied; "he fears we would be mismatched. We are so very different, he says."

"In what way are we so different?" he asked, with a show of dignity.

"Well, father says I am of such a ready and willing disposition, while you seem so—so backward, so reluctant and hesitating; so—so loath to come to the point, don't you know."

"He does, does he?" blustered George, bracing up, and the very next afternoon she was showing her girl friends how stunning it looked on the finger of her left hand.

Wise Johnnie.

"Johnnie!"

"Yes'm?"

"Why are you sitting on that boy's face?"

"Why, f—"

"Did I not tell you to always count a hundred before you gave way to passion and struck another boy?"

"Yes'm, and I'm doin' it; I'm just settin' on his face so he'll be here when I'm done countin' the hundred."

Raffles' Blunder.

Raffles, Jr., had been caught with the plunder in his rooms. "What a chump I was," he sighed bitterly, "not to have told the officers I had made a pleasure tour of the country and had collected these articles from the different summer hotels as souvenirs."

And just then Sherlock Holmes loomed up in the distance.

Meeker—Better half! What do you mean by that?

Bleeker—Why, your wife, of course. Meeker—Huh! She's not my better half—she's the whole thing.

GENTLEMANLY QUALIFICATIONS.

First Twentieth Century Girl—I never had any opinion of Adam. A man who could excuse himself by saying "the woman tempted me" had none of the instincts of a gentleman.

Second Girl—What could you expect of the first man? You know it takes three generations to make a gentleman.

Looking Forward.

In the great future there will come a day When we a path of confidence may tread And learn exactly what our great men say. Instead of what somebody says they said.

Opinions Aired.

"Were the commencement exercises interesting?"

"Very. The time was divided between advice from public men on the selection of a career and suggestions from graduates on how to run the government."

"No," replied the girl, "the woman told me none had been hatched yet, but that she had four hens seated."

Life ain't all easy sailin', They's brakens more or less; If wasn't any failures We wouldn't know success.

The roses need the sunshine, Also a little rain; Life needs a lot o' pleasure, Also a little pain.

Too much of one or t'other Is harmful, goodness knows; Then let us keep on hopin' To blossom like the rose!

In the Old Farmhouse.

"Well, I'll declare!" exclaimed the city boarder who reads every item in the papers before breakfast. "If here isn't an account of a sacred cow discovered in Egypt and said to be 4,000 years old."

"That accounts for it," chuckled the ex-clown boarder as he stirred his oatmeal.

"Accounts for what?"

"Why, I bet this butter was made from the cream that cow gave at her last milking."

An Egotist.

There was a man in our town Who was so vain and proud That 'twas simply impossible To lose him in a crowd.

His Point of View.

"John, dear," queried the young wife, glancing up from the physical culture magazine she was perusing, "what is your idea of a perfect figure?"

"Well," replied her husband, "$100,000 may not be perfection, but it's near enough to satisfy a man of my simple tastes."

Explained.

"Yep, our new town is growing remarkably fast. We're mighty proud of it."

"How many churches have you got?"

"There ain't any churches yet, but we've got 97 automobiles!"

Her Observation.

"Did you know," said the scientific boarder, "that a clock ticks faster in winter than in summer?"

"No, I wasn't aware that a clock did," answered the landlady, "but I know a gas meter does."

A SOCIETY MAN.

Mrs. Parvenue (engaging cook)—My husband is very particular and entertains a great deal. He's a prominent society man, and—Bridget Malone—Sure, thin, he ought to know my cousin, Dan Malone. He belongs to most ivy society Ol Iver heard of.

GRAHAM-WHITE

British Aviator Who Gave Boston's Mayor a Lift.

MR. TAFT DECLINED

The President Would Not Trust Himself to the Airlines.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 9.—President Taft motored to Squantum Field and took in the aviation meet. The president watched the flights for two hours, declined an invitation to soar aloft himself, and with some difficulty suppressed the zeal of his young son Charles to join the troops of flyers. The president had not been there many minutes when Graham-White, the English aviator, approached and was presented.

"Are you going up?" asked the president.

"Yes," replied the Englishman, "right away, and I am going to take Mayor Fitzgerald up with me."

As Mayor Fitzgerald was leaving the earth he waved at the president and Mr. Taft returned the greeting. After Graham-White had brought Boston's mayor safely down he and the Boston executive posed for a picture with the president.

BEVERLY CRITICISES
LACK OF FORETHOUGHT

Complaint That Nelson Neglected the Main Chance.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 9.—Some of President Taft's friends are inclined to criticize Chairman Nelson and other Republicans on the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee for the result of the committee meeting in Minneapolis. The Republican members of the committee who have made up their minds to clear Secretary Ballinger have known all along that the Democrats and possibly Insurgent Madison would demand his removal. It is being pointed out here now that with this certain knowledge at hand the Republican regulars on the committee did not have the foresight to see that they ought to have enough of their number present to control the committee meeting. The absence of the regular Republicans gave the Democrats and Insurgent Madison a chance to dominate the meeting and to place before the country the impression that the committee at a regular meeting had found against Ballinger. Some of President Taft's friends complain now that the Republican regulars on the committee ought never to have let the thing get away from them in this manner. They add that the action of the Democrat-Insurgent combine at Minneapolis was exactly in keeping with the tactics which the Pinchot forces followed through the entire inquiry of getting their impression upon the country first and leaving it for the Ballinger people to tag on the explanations. It is being predicted now that even with the majority report of the committee in his favor, Secretary Ballinger will have hard work in combating the impression that has gone out through the action at Wednesday's meeting in Minneapolis.

DEADLY EXPLOSION

Three Coal Passers Killed by Accident on Battleship.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The North Dakota, one of the largest and most powerful battleships of the navy, had a fire in her fuel oil system while in Hampton Roads. Three coal passers of the fireroom crew were killed and eight other enlisted men were injured. The exact cause of the fire has not been ascertained. Officers, however, believe that there was a leakage in the pipes and that the oil was ignited by sparks from the funnel furnace. The extent of the damage to the ship has not been ascertained.

Death of Fred Gebhard.

New York, Sept. 9.—Frederick Gebhard is dead at Garden City, L. I. For thirty years Gebhard had been one of the most widely known men about town. In 1882 he became famous on two continents as the admirer of Mrs. Langtry.

School Announcement.

JUDGE J. H. BATTEN.

President of the Hamilton Club of Chicago.

PANAMA ELECTION
HOTLY CONTESTED

Mr. Knox Repudiates Rumors of Interference.

Panama, Sept. 9.—Excitement is running high on the eve of the election of a vice president of the republic by the national assembly. There is much speculation everywhere owing to a report that the United States will annex Panama if a certain candidate is not elected. Notwithstanding the pressure that has been brought to bear in the past few days, the assembly is still firm in its determination to elect a Liberal vice president.

Pablo Arosemena is mentioned as the candidate who is likely to be successful. Senors Porras, Diaz and Boyd are among the other Liberal candidates. Secretary Lewis is mentioned as the Conservative candidate.

Those Stories Repudiated.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The state department has instructed R. O. Marsh, charge d'affaires of the American legation at Panama, to repudiate the alleged interview with him printed recently in Panama newspapers, in which Mr. Marsh was made to say that the United States would annex and absorb the republic of Panama if it does not yield to the desires of the United States in the election of a vice president.

IN SELF DEFENSE

Young Woman Shot Former Sweetheart, So Police Say.

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 9.—That he was killed by his former sweetheart while walking along a lonely road, is the statement of officials regarding the tragedy which preceded the finding of the body of Jule Henley, a young farmer, near Buffalo, Putnam county, West Virginia. The county officials declare that a young woman whom Henley had been keeping company with for several years, has acknowledged that she shot Henley while defending herself against his advances. The young woman was not arrested.

BLINDED BRIDEGROOM

Young Brother of Bride-to-Be Blocked the Ceremony.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 9.—Small boys led by the younger brother of the bride took exception to a wedding and by throwing dirt in the eyes of the bridegroom, James A. Jones, as he was on his way to the residence of Miss Hubert Dammann, checked the ceremony. Jones's carriage had nearly reached the bride's residence when the charge of the youngsters was made, which ended in a specialist being called. Jones's bad eye caused a postponement of the wedding.

Half Hour Not Yet Up.

Connersville, Ind., Sept. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Winters, of Eighth street have a girl baby about three weeks old, whose mother they are anxious to find. A young woman dressed in black, and of good appearance, called at their home and explained that she had come downtown shopping with her child, and asked if she might leave it with Mrs. Winters for half an hour. The request was granted. She has not been seen or heard from since.

WORK RESUMED

The Strike of the Illinois Coal Miners Settled at Last.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The strike of coal miners in Illinois is settled. The 40,000 or 45,000 men who have been idle since last April will probably resume their labors next Monday. Approach of cold weather, shortage of coal and the demand of the railroads and large manufacturers for an immediate adjustment of the differences between the mine owners and the miners induced both sides to make concessions.

Your kidney trouble may be of long standing, it may be either acute or chronic, but whatever it is Foley's Kidney Remedy will aid you to get rid of it quickly and restore your natural health and vigor. "One bottle of Foley's Kidney Remedy made me well," said J. Sibbull, of Grand View, Wis. Commence taking it now. Sold by all druggists.

Nature's Refrigerator.

Michigan City, Ind., Sept. 9.—Michigan City is probably the only place in Indiana that has three feet of snow. Workmen opened a sand pit at the foot of Hoosier slide on Dec. 5 last. The place became filled with snow during the winter and drifting sand covered the snowdrift. Workmen recently opened the sand pit and found a bed of snow three feet deep.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is today the best known medicine in use for the relief and cure of bowel complaints. It cures griping, diarrhoea, dysentery, and should be taken at the first unnatural looseness of the bowels. It is equally valuable for children and adults. It always cures. Sold by Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

Simeon E. Baldwin, ex-chief justice of the supreme court of Connecticut, was named for governor at the Connecticut Democratic state convention.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. Sold by Andrews-Schwenk Drug Co.

INDIANA STATE FAIR

Exhibits Being Placed in Readiness for Next Week's Big Event.

Indianapolis, Sept. 9.—The state fair grounds were opened to exhibitors yesterday with fifteen department superintendents present to assist them. All departments of the fair will be opened to the public Monday, but the board will close the grounds Sunday. It has become a habit for Indianapolis people to throng the park the Sunday before the fair opens, but the board announces there will be absolutely no admittance this year, in order to facilitate the preparatory work of exhibitors. All of the streets have been oiled. This, taken with heavy rains, is counted upon to make a dustless fair.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

Free to You and Every Sister Suffering from Woman's Ailments.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.
I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatise with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or White Discharges, Uterine Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors, or Growths; also pains in head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney, and bladder troubles where caused by weakness peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten day's treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all old or young. $4,000 to be Raised—Annual Meeting of Christian Churches of County Today.

Today the annual meeting of the Christian churches of Jackson county is being held at Medora. Tomorrow the new Medora Christian chapel will be dedicated and it is expected that there will be a large attendance at the exercises. It is one of the handsomest country churches in southern Indiana and members of the denomination throughout the county are much interested in tomorrow's event.

The B. & O. S-W. will run a special train of four coaches from Seymour to Medora tomorrow morning, leaving here at 9:30. Stops will be made at Brownstown and Vallonia. Returning, the train will leave Medora at 5 p. m.

The meeting will be opened at 10:30 with devotional exercises, following which the dedicatory sermon will be preached by Elder Harley Jackson, of Seymour. The work of raising the $4,000 yet due on the church will then be taken up by Elder Jackson. At noon there will be a basket dinner at the church. At 2 p. m. communion will be held and the services of dedication finished. The meeting will close at 4 p. m.

The meeting today was well attended. The program began at 1 p. m. and was as follows:

Opening devotional exercises, Jesse Reynolds; address of welcome, C. V. Weddell; response, H. D. Alldredge; report of county board; reports of congregation; appointment of committees; Discussion of county work, O. S. Brooke.

Saturday evening, 7:30: Devotional, Rev. J. B. Cross; recitation, Miss Elva Pollock; sermon, Rev. Samuel Hobson.

A two days' meeting had been arranged for, but tomorrow's program was eliminated after it was decided to hold the dedication at this time.

The DEADLY HOUSE-FLY

PHOTO5
COPYRIGHT BY
GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

HE fly referred to in this article is the one most commonly found in our houses—the Musca domestica of Linnaeus.

Speaking broadly, man has made the house-fly; it has developed along with the human dwelling. If we had no closed-in dwelling places it is doubtful if the house-fly, as at present constituted, could continue to exist. It thrives simply because we afford it food, protection and breeding places.

The house-fly at first is only a little worm, wriggling his tiny grub-like form in some incubating pile of filth, usually the manure pile, the outhouse, or the mound of rubbish, or garbage in the back yard. In this condition he is easily killed, and it should be the duty of every person to kill him now. The house-fly could not exist if everything were kept perfectly clean and sanitary. Exterminate the fly-worms, do away with its breeding places, and there will be no flies.

The common house-fly is coming to be known as the "typhoid fly," and when the term becomes universal greater care will be exercised in protecting the house from his presence.

Flies swallow the germs of typhoid in countless millions while feeding on the excreta of typhoid patients. As a result they spread a thousand times more typhoid germs in their excreta than on their feet.

Flies kill a greater number of human beings than all the beasts of prey, and poisonous serpents, for they spread disease which slays thousands.

As soon as the fly comes out of his shell he is full grown and starts out in the world to make a living and if your home is not clean he knows it, for the fly can discern an unclean odor for miles.

As much as they like odors of filth they dislike clean smells, and where the former will attract, the latter will repulse them. A pleasant-smelling substance—the fragrance of flowers, geraniums, mignonette, lavender, or any perfumery—will drive them away.

Most of our diseases are caused by invisible germs that lodge and grow in our bodies, destroying our tissues or poisoning us with their excreta. These germs may be brought to us from some sick person by whatever is large enough to carry them, and has the opportunity. Combine this fact with what every one knows about flies, and we see at once the tremendous importance of flies as carriers of human disease germs.

Look closely at the picture of the fly resting on the glass and viewed from below. Look at the feet and observe that each of them is equipped with two claws and two light-colored pads. The fly clings to rough surfaces by means of the claws and to smooth surfaces by a combined action of the claws and pads. The fly's pads are covered with thousands of minute short hairs, sticky at the end. There is no suction—merely adhesion.

All his grown-up life the fly has to manage with sticky feet. Imagine our plight if the soles of our feet were sticking plaster, perennially renewing its stickiness!

To such inconvenience the fly is constantly subject, and it is this that has bred into him the habit of frequently preening himself, particularly his feet. These are constantly becoming clogged with adhering substances, and this contamination the fly must assiduously remove if his feet are to act properly in supporting him on slippery places. If this contamination is too sticky to rub off the fly laps it off, and it then passes off in his excreta.

The fly lays her eggs in the manure pile or other objectionable filth. All the germs—all the imaginable microbes—fasten themselves on the spongy feet. He brings them into the house and wipes them off. The fly you see walking over the food you are about to eat is covered with filth and germs. If there is any dirt in your house or about your premises, or those of your neighbors, he has just come from it. Watch him as he stands on the sugar industriously wiping his feet. He is getting rid of disease germs, rubbing them on the sugar that you are going to eat, leaving the poison for you to swallow.

This does more to spread typhoid fever and cholera infantum and other intestinal diseases than any other cause.

Disease attacks human beings only when they are brought in contact with it. For instance, you cannot get typhoid fever unless you swallow the germs of typhoid, and you do not swallow these germs unless they get on the food you eat, or in the liquids you drink, or on the glasses or cups from which you drink.

Intestinal diseases are more frequent whenever and wherever flies are most abundant, and they, and not the summer heat, are the active agents of its spread.

There is special danger when flies drop into such fluid as milk. This forms an ideal culture material for the bacillus. A few germs washed from the body of one fly may develop into millions within a few hours, and the person who drinks such milk will receive large doses of bacilli, which may later cause serious sickness.

Here are some valuable fly "don't's" for the housewife:

Don't allow flies in your house.

Don't allow your fruits and confections to be exposed to the swarms of flies.

Don't let flies crawl over the baby's mouth and swarm upon the nipple of its nursing bottle.

Strike at the root of the evil. Dispose of waste materials in such a way that the house-fly cannot propagate, for flies breed in horse manure, decaying vegetables, dead animals, and all kinds of filth, so look after the garbage cans, see that they are cleaned, sprinkled with lime or kerosene oil, and closely covered.

Screen all windows and doors and insist that your grocer, butcher, baker and every one from whom you buy foodstuffs does the same, and remember that a large percentage of flies breed in the stable.

There is more health in a well-screened house than in many a doctor's visit.

After you have cleaned up your own premises, inspect the neighborhood for fly-breeding places. Call the attention of the owner to them and, if he does not remove them, complain to the board of health.

Keep flies away from the kitchen. Keep flies out of the dining room and away from the sick, especially from those ill with contagious diseases.

To clear rooms of flies, carbolic acid may be used as follows: Heat a shovel or any similar article and drop thereon 20 drops of carbolic acid. The vapor kills the flies.

A cheap and perfectly reliable fly poison, one which is not dangerous to human life, is bichromate of potash in solution. Dissolve one dram, which can be bought at any drug store, in two ounces of water, and add a little sugar. Put some of this solution in shallow dishes and distribute them about the house.

Sticky fly paper, traps and liquid poisons are among the things to use in killing flies, but the latest, cheapest, and best is a solution of formalin or formaldehyde in water. A spoonful of this liquid put into a quart of a pint of water and exposed in the room will be enough to kill all the flies.

To quickly clear the room where there are many flies, burn pyrethrum powder in the room.

MALE HOUSE-FLY

This stupefies the flies, when they may be swept up and burned.

If there are flies in the dining room of your hotel, restaurant, or boarding house, complain to the proprietor that the premises are not clean.

The hookworm is undermining the vitality of a section, but the house fly threatens the health of the world.

Pest and plague and fever follow in its filthy footsteps. Its victims are legion.

The mosquito carries the germ of yellow fever. The sting of the tsetse fly infects with the numbing virus of the slow but certain sleeping sickness.

But the house fly carries on its sticky feet the potent poison of a dozen deaths.

The snake warns by hiss or rattle, and, in defense, strikes to kill, and then is to be shot or clubbed or ground beneath the boot heel. But the malicious, annoying fly, satellite of sickness, maker of cemeteries, deposits its slow poison and buzzes away, ever busy, never still, always on its errand of distributing the venom of embryo disease.

It wasn't so long ago that the house fly was neither known nor understood. Screens were considered a luxury, not a necessity; a matter of comfort, not a contribution to health.

But that is not the case now. The fly has been studied, its habits noted, its germ-laden body inspected through the microscope and photographed.

Bacteriologists, scientists, physicians know the house fly as it really is. They realize that incontrovertible proof has demonstrated that flies kill a greater number of human beings every year than all the beasts of prey and all the poisonous crawling things that live.

And it is the consensus of opinion that a campaign of education is essential to bring the general public to an appreciation of the truth.

These facts are known to every scientist. What is being done now is to carry these facts home to every householder, every person who eats in restaurants and lunchrooms and to every mother who watches her baby with an eye to warding off every possible danger. There is a great campaign being waged against the fly—"typhoid fly," as it is called, and Washington is the center of the campaign.

The war is being stirred up and urged by Richard B. Watrous, secretary of the American Civic association, which has covered the country with posters, circulars, booklets and even has taken up the moving picture film as a weapon against the pest and a method of popular instruction. The association pamphlets are simple and to the point. When one reads the four pages of fly literature, a deep disgust for the buzzing things is born, and another soldier in the anti-fly army has been drafted.

The accompanying photographs, magnified many thousand times, and more just as interesting, were made by Dr. N. A. Cobbs with a specially invented camera for the National Geographic society. Dr. Cobbs is making a special study of the nation's pest, as are other leading bacteriologists and scientists who have come to realize the importance of the work.

One of the odd things in connection with the campaign of education that is being conducted in many cities is the fact that the unpleasantness of the flies' habits has caused many a person to cease the description of the fly life and enter a sort of silent war. However, some cities and associations have issued enormous posters portraying the daily life of a fly. It is pretty bad. Several women have objected to seeing the posters, although it has been proven to them that the pictures are not overdrawn.

Moving picture films, showing the life and habits of the fly, have been shown in some of the large cities. These films were taken across the United States and shown in hundreds of cheap theaters and have been considered of great value in disseminating knowledge of just what the fly is and how much death and disease he can introduce into a house. In one of the cities protests were received from some rather delicately sensed ladies and the mayor ordered the films off the boards.

The chairman of that state board of health asked the reason and was told that protests were made. He then asked for the names of some of the protesting women.

He called on several, and learned that their feelings had been outraged by witnessing the daily life of a nasty fly, and they believed that the sight was too nauseating for the public.

Thereupon the state officer took the ladies out into their own back yards and kitchens and in more than one instance showed them where the fly was doing the same thing in real life that the moving films told of, and by that sort of work introduced some real war to Mr. Fly.

In every city bulletins are being issued showing how flies may be killed by the wholesale.

The Tragedy of Age

HOSE of us who have been privileged to read "The Life of an Empress" can scarcely have laid down the book without having reflected with sadness on the mighty changes that age is likely to bring, especially to the once brilliant and admired who in old age, alas! appear faded, worn and well-nigh forgotten.

Contrast the picture of the beautiful Eugenie in the front of the book with the one on the last pages, and one can read with an approach to accuracy the intervening events, stamping their impress on the altered countenance and whole general appearance.

The charming woman in evening dress, gay, courted, the cynosure of all eyes permitted to behold her loveliness, with drooping eyes and queenly mien, shoulders that slope perfectly and possessed withal of regal aspect—this picture, we say, bears but little likeness to the pathetic one of later years, with its sad features, stooping shoulders and sable-clad figure.

Reading the eventful story of the life, one cannot but feel profound pity for this woman of so checkered a career. Once at the head of a brilliant court, admired, flattered, sought and followed, she reveled in the pomp and luxury, the homage and adulation of the buoyant, vivacious throng. Then came the terrible disaster that left her a stricken, childless mother. Internal disturbance, wrecked position and ultimate expulsion from court circles, the death of the emperor and downfall of all earthly prospects of success or fame brought poignant and abiding sense of sorrow and defeat.

With youth departed, title gone and erectness of figure vanished, one of her earlier friends, after meeting her, wrote in his diary:

"At once recognized the Countess de Pierrefonds. With the help of her long ebony stick she walked over to a parapet overlooking the sea. She leaned upon it and steadily gazed toward a point . . . where the contours of Corsica could be discerned. Her mind apparently traveled back to the origin and downfall of the family with which fate had so strangely linked her."

"As the cumbersome brouche drove away, I recalled the whole past—the Tuileries, the Louvre, Notre Dame, Saint-Cloud, Compiègne, Fontainebleau, the Imperial Chaise, the Hundred Guards, and, above all, the supreme power and the dazzling beauty of this woman—of all this nothing remained!"

Early Vanity Without Profit.
And this melancholy chronicle is but one that might be told of countless cases, not so prominent or widely known, but where ambition, pride of place and brightly alluring prospects have, by some sad irony of fate, been dashed to the ground, leaving disappointment, desolation and ruined prospects to eat like a cruel canker into heart and soul.

The pensive eyes, with their mournful droop, giving one, as it were, a heart-broken gaze, the heavily draped figure, shrouded midst unrelieved falls and folds of somber crape, tell all too plainly the story of a lonely and desolate old age.

It is said she sits about in some of the beautiful, picturesque gardens brooding, silent and secluded, dreaming, apparently, all by herself, on joys and triumphs forever past.

There sit in lonely places today men and women who have seen "each earthly hope decay"; poor and weak and old, they yet have laid hold on eternal riches, and despite the devastating trials and sorrows of life, they are looking forward instead of backward. It is true that it is given to but few to have so illustrious a past to dwell upon as the ex-empress of France can recall, but the grandeur of the past only emphasizes for her the quiet and the dearth of her waning days.

The Need of All.
After all, rich or poor, high or low, we all stand in unmistakable need of the light of a "glowing eastern gate" as age tells its unmistakable story on face and hair and stooping frame.

Every lengthened life holds its own tragedies. They may have been of a simple nature, yet hard enough they have generally been for the ones who have had to bear them. But, let every mournful yesterday point to a glad tomorrow, for by the grace of God all past defeats may point to coming victories. This is no idle speculation, for we have the promise of the scriptures that for the believer in Christ our light afflictions, which are (comparatively) but for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things that are seen, or that have been seen, but at the precious and beautiful things that are eternal.

The Daily Companionship.

It is as we go on our way that the angels of God meet us. The path of duty is often difficult, but it is never altogether lonely, for angels walk beside us and Christ is our constant companion; it may be steep, but its rocky heights command fair and wide prospects; it is the way of the cross, but it is thereby the way of light. We need not go halting along the way of God's commandments; for he will so fill our hearts that we may "run up with joy the shining way."

TEETOTALERS WANT A DRINK

Varieties of Beverages Do Not Meet Demand for Refreshment With Bite of Spirits.

During the recent summer weather London's cafes and restaurants made tentative displays of the stereotyped "nonalcoholic" beverages.

However, it was not warm enough to make many people sufficiently thirsty to drink them, though the fact that they were once more in evidence caused many teetotalers to complain that they were at a loss as to what to drink in winter.

"The trouble with temperance drinks," a manufacturing chemist intimately connected with "the trade" said, "is that they are either brewed—and so contain alcohol—or concoctions of incongruous materials dissolved in water mechanically aerated, and therefore necessarily lack distinction and character."

"It will probably be news to many that the law allows nonalcoholic drinks to contain 2½ per cent. of proof spirit, and practically all brewed teetotal beverages do contain it."

"Home brewed ginger ale, such as one buys at country refreshment cottages, frequently contains more alcohol than bitter beer does."

"Having dismissed such drinks as being alcoholic, there remains only the gassy bottles of variously flavored water to which different fancy names are given; or lime juice cordial and lemon squash, both lowering to the system if too freely consumed."

"No one is fully satisfied with these concoctions, but the trouble is that it has not been found possible to evolve anything better."

"The fact is, no substitute for alcohol has been invented, and until some one discovers a substance with the 'bite' of spirit, but without its intoxicating qualities, the problem will remain unsolved."

"For the man who can invent a palatable teetotal drink a fortune waits, nor will the brewers be able, speaking generally, to compete against him by making and imitating his product."

"For example, a tremendous quantity of ginger wine is drunk in this country."

"The taste for this has survived from the time when every household in England made its British wines, but now, owing to the massing of the people in the towns and the want of accommodation for such work, it is manufactured by old firms, and much of it is sold to the brewers to be retailed in their tied houses."

"Notwithstanding the quantity of this brewed beverage that is drunk, the brewers do not make it themselves. The inland revenue authorities would impose many restrictions, and in most cases the articles of association of the brewing companies restrict the business carried on to the brewing of stout and beer."

"Orange wine is another British wine that has an enormous consumption in the smaller towns in the provinces, yet the brewers do not make it."

"British wines pay no duty, though they are often as strong as bottled beer."

"One firm, registered at Somerset house lately, thinks it has solved the problem by the introduction to the public of unfermented fruit juices, principally those of various grapes."

"Fruits are the finest and purest natural foods," the managing director said, "for they contain grape sugar, albumen and various valuable salts."

"These are all retained in the fruit juices, or alcohol-free wines, we sell, and we consider that fermentation of them would be injurious, for the sugar is converted to alcohol and the albumen is destroyed when fermentation takes place."

Leaders of Temperance in the Army.

United States Secretary of War Dickinson has recently followed the example of Gen. Frederick Dent Grant in publicly declaring himself on the side of total abstinence. He writes: "I believe in everything that encourages voluntary abstinence, both within and without the army. The man who abstains is better qualified to be a useful and law-abiding citizen and to promote his own happiness and that of his family and friends. One of the greatest burdens upon our country is that of crime which is the direct result of drink. When the Romans achieved their greatest success they were water drinkers."

Drink in the Subarctics.

Writing on conditions in Labrador Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell, the noted missionary physician of the coast, states, "A careful study of the health conditions of the coast by the doctors of our staff all these years has shown that there is no need for liquor whatever in these subarctic climates; that, on the contrary, the first man to go down in hard physical conditions is almost always the drinking man. Among men on the sea the dangers from its use are enormously enhanced."

It is always easier to talk of the divine plans than it is to do them.

It is better to learn to still the spirit within than the storm without.

How Lincoln Was Re-elected

Harry Vanderbilt Obtained Nearly $300,000 to Pay for the Campaign by Personal Appeals to Wealthy Men in the East.

As a remarkable instance of how it is possible for a man to accomplish a work regarded at the time as of supreme importance and still remain in comparative obscurity, the case of Harry Vanderbilt, a nephew of Commodore Vanderbilt, who died recently in New York city at a green old age after making a fortune for himself as a manufacturer, is of especial interest. For this Vanderbilt, on the authority of his life-long friend, B. J. Jayne, who earned a name and a fortune for himself in the seventies by uncovering a nest of great customs frauds, should be accredited with the honor of having made it possible for Abraham Lincoln to secure his re-election to the presidency in 1864.

"For some years prior to the outbreak of the Civil war," said Mr. Jayne, who is now almost eighty years of age, "Harry Vanderbilt held a responsible position in the Portsmouth (New Hampshire) navy yard; but when Salmon P. Chase became Lincoln's first secretary of the treasury, Mr. Vanderbilt went to that department as appointment clerk, remaining there for more than ten years, or until the middle of Grant's administration. It was during Lincoln's first administration that Mr. Vanderbilt's ability as a trusted political worker was discovered and proved on several occasions by the party chiefs.

"It is well known that, following Lincoln's renomination, the party leaders in charge of the campaign greatly feared that Mr. Lincoln would fail of re-election on account of the inability of the national committee to obtain funds sufficient to carry on a thorough and aggressive campaign. It was at a very anxious period of the war. The drain on the resources of the nation had been exhausting and no immediate relief was in sight. Taxation had reached what appeared to be the limit of safety and all demands for money for political purposes were met by sullenness or absolute refusal.

The national committee seemed to be powerless to find a way out of the uncompromising situation. Its chairman, Henry J. Raymond, the distinguished newspaper editor, was not an adept in the art of raising campaign funds, and he had a profound distaste for ordinary political methods of getting money for campaign purposes. Gov. E. D. Morgan of New York, his predecessor in the national chairmanship, had collected upward of a hundred thousand dollars to conduct Lincoln's first campaign, but it was estimated by the party leaders that con-

Tweed's Methods in Business

Illustrated by the Impulsive Manner in Which the "Boss" Bought Some Property He Wanted to Add to Country Estate.

When William M. Tweed, who is notorious in the history of American graft as "Boss" Tweed, was at the height of his power in New York city—when, in other words, the metropolis of the New World practically ate out of his hand—he lived the greater part of the year not in the city that he and his ring were robbing right and left, but in the town of Greenwich, Conn.

There Tweed bought a farm in 1865. It is now the country home of Mrs. A. A. Anderson, who is well known throughout the country as a woman of great philanthropy. In the farm as it was when Tweed bought it there were forty acres, and upon the place Tweed began at once to spend a large amount of money. The barn which he built cost $40,000, a large sum for such a building in those days, and it gained national notoriety.

About five years later Tweed decided that he would like to secure an adjoining piece of property and add it to his country home. This was a tract of twenty acres owned by the late Frederick Mead, who in his time was a prominent merchant and banker in New York city. Tweed was very anxious to obtain possession of Mr. Mead's acres because he felt that they would round out and complete his own place. Whatever else may be said to Tweed's dishonor, this must be said in his favor—he was a man of a good deal of artistic taste and had a keen eye for natural beauty.

"What will you sell that twenty-acre tract for?" Tweed said to Mr. Mead one day.

"I don't think I want to sell it at all," was the reply.

"Well," said Tweed, "think it over, and if you can decide upon a price let me know."

Several weeks later Tweed, meeting Mr. Mead at the Greenwich railroad station as they both were on their way to New York city, pressed the latter considerably more than double that sum would be required to re-elect their candidates. To whom should be allotted the herculean task of obtaining this immense sum?

"It was at this trying moment that the name of Harry Vanderbilt was suggested as that of a man who knew many prominent men in the money centers. Who put forward his name Mr. Vanderbilt never learned, but immediately thereafter he was asked to undertake the raising of the campaign fund, and, with characteristic modesty, he replied that he would do his best to get together the badly needed funds.

"Quietly, and with his mission known to only a few, Mr. Vanderbilt began the task of trying to raise at least two hundred thousand dollars, and as much as three hundred thousand dollars if possible. The first city that he visited, as I now remember it, was Boston. There he made personal appeals to men of wealth who were of the Republican party, and at last secured from them, either in actual

Lecture Beecher Forgot About

Newspaper Accounts of the Sullivan-Ryan Prize Fight Caused the Preacher to Be Late for Engagement at Divinity School.

The well nigh universal interest that was being taken in a certain event scheduled to take place in San Francisco on July 4 has served to remind me of the lecture that great and powerful preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, forgot all about. My authority for the anecdote, which reveals one side of the abundant human nature which was so characteristic of Mr. Beecher, is the late Prof. Johnson T. Platt of the Yale Law school.

"Mr. Beecher was always a favorite lecturer at Yale, before the divinity school," said Professor Platt. "You may recall that he delivered several series of lectures on the Lyman Beecher foundation, named after his father, and at other times he also lectured before the school.

"Well, on the afternoon of the particular Beecher lecture I have in mind the hall was packed to the doors with students and others eager to hear him. The hour set for the beginning of the lecture was three o'clock, but when it arrived there appeared no Henry Ward Beecher, to the mild surprise of the professors in charge, for hitherto Mr. Beecher had never been tardy in appearing in the hall. But when it got to be nearly half after three and still no Beecher, the surprise and consternation were great, and, after a hasty consultation, a proto put a price upon his twenty acres. Tweed, in fact, was insistent that Mr. Mead should do so, but the merchant as steadily insisted that his place was not for sale.

"But you will sell if you can get your price, won't you?" Tweed finally asked. "You will certainly sell the property for a Tweed price?"

"What do you mean by a Tweed price?" asked Mr. Mead.

"Why," was the reply, "a price that Tweed will be willing to pay."

Mr. Mead laughed. "Well, I would sell that twenty-acre lot for $55,000," he said, still laughing. "That is $2,750 an acre. You would not be willing to pay that for it?"

Instantly Tweed turned to the station agent. "Look here," he said, "lend me pen and ink, will you?" At the same time he pulled out a check book, opened it, seized the proffered ink and pen, wrote out a check for $55,000 on the little shelf before the ticket agent's window and handed it to the astonished and nonplussed Mr. Mead. "Now that I have paid you, Mr. Mead," he said, "you can send me the warranty deed at your convenience."

A high value upon the property at that time would have been $500 an acre. Today a high value upon it would probably be a thousand dollars an acre, almost two-thirds less an acre than Tweed paid in the heyday of his notoriety.

Cure for Sleeping Sickness.

A new treatment for the sleeping sickness is called the cold cure, and requires a refrigerator with a hospital ward installed in it. The room is painted white, devoid of carpet, but made comfortable with a table, a deck chair and an electric light. The patient who submits to the treatment sits for hours at a time in the ward which is kept at a temperature of from 10 to 20 degrees below freezing point. The room is 12 feet by 9 feet and has double wooden walls, the space between being packed with cotton.—Popular Mechanics.

cash or pledges, $8,000. Next he canvassed Philadelphia, where he also secured a large sum, then New York and several other cities. In none was his mission known to or even suspected by any one on whom he did not call; and in this manner he at last got together a fund that totaled close on to three hundred thousand dollars, to the great delight and relief of the national committee. Then, having been assured by those in the secret that he had performed a great service in behalf of the Union, Mr. Vanderbilt went back to his duties as appointment clerk in the treasury department.

Just how Mr. Vanderbilt induced the men he visited to contribute to the campaign fund, no one ever knew exactly," added Mr. Jayne. "All any one ever learned from him was that he made personal appeals. He never boasted about the important part he played in making possible the re-election of Abraham Lincoln. I am one of the very few men with whom Harry Vanderbilt ever talked about this feat of his; and I am certain that I am the only one now living who knows personally that it was he who raised the Lincoln campaign fund of 1864."

fessor was sent to the hotel where Mr. Beecher usually stopped, to get trace of the missing lecturer, if possible.

"Yes, Mr. Beecher was stopping at the hotel, the clerk informed the professor, who thereupon hastened to Mr. Beecher's room, knocked upon the door and was told to come in, which he did at once. But before he could frame even a 'how do you do' Mr. Beecher, spying him, let out an astonished 'I declare!' followed it up by hastily pulling out his watch and looking at it, and exclaiming in dismay, 'Why, it's going to four, and you have been waiting for me all this time at the divinity school.'

"He grabbed for his hat. Then, as he was reaching for his overcoat, he turned on the professor with a quaint smile.

"Oh, well," he said, "I might as well make a full confession. When I left my home in Brooklyn this morning I bought copies of two or three morning newspapers. There was something in them that interested me greatly, and I intended to read all about it on my way to this city. But after I got seated in the train a friend came along, I shared my seat with him, and he talked to me all the way here, so that I did not have an opportunity to read my papers. But as soon as I got to the hotel I saw that I would have an hour of leisure before the lecture began, so I slipped up here and began reading—and, do you know, I found the reports of the event so graphic that I actually forgot all about the lecture. It's in the Anglo-Saxon blood to be interested in such an event, doctor—I was reading about the Sullivan-Ryan fight which took place yesterday down in Mississippi."

"For a moment or two Mr. Beecher looked the professor of divinity squarely in the eye. Then he reached over and dug that gentleman in the ribs. 'And now that I have made my confession,' he said, laughing, 'I'm going to say something to you. I would be willing to wager that you yourself read the report of that battle with bare knuckles this morning before you went to the divinity school.'

"Well, Mr. Beecher," replied the professor, "I might as well confess, too, I did get up a little earlier than usual this morning and go to the front door for the morning paper. It hadn't come, so I actually waited at the door until the boy brought it. Then I sat down and read the report of the fight before breakfast."

"Mr. Beecher beamed on his companion in wickedness. 'Come,' he said, and linked arms with the other. And that shameless professor afterwards told me that the lecture which Mr. Beecher delivered a little later was the best he ever heard that gifted orator make on any platform."

Studying Bird Habits.

Whether birds, especially migratory ones, return to the same nests year after year is a question of much interest to the naturalist. Swallows that summer in England do not winter north of Africa, but an observer at High Halden, Kent, England, has recorded that one returned on April 12 to a nest it occupied last year. It was recognized by a ring placed on its leg May 8, 1909.

To gain a better knowledge of bird habits more than 2,000 British birds were last year marked with inscribed aluminum rings, and twice as many more will be similarly tagged this year.

The Summer Girl.

"How'd you like to be engaged to a millionaire?"

"I was engaged to one all last summer, and he seldom spent a dime. I want to be engaged to a young man who is down here for two weeks with about $300 in his roll."

Hints For Hostess

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS
for Those Planning Seasonable Entertainments

For Labor Day.

Monday, the fifth of September, brings "Labor Day" and for most people it also brings the end of vacation days. At many resorts the season closes on this date and its "back to the mill" for the children and in consequence, for the grown ups, too. When I was wondering what to do to plan a little variety for entertainments on the occasion a dear woman who exclaimed "All days are Labor days for me," but I will tell you what a hostess I know is planning for a luncheon on that day.

She has provided the most bewitching sweeping caps for the guests to don before they go into the dining-room; the invitations say "Please come prepared to relate some item interesting to housekeepers, or tell of some labor saving device." The prizes for the best three items are, first, a new toaster for a gas stove; second, a set of bread knives; third, an improved lemon squeezer with a little china pitcher for the juice to match. The favors are all diminutive articles in household use—a wee broom, dustpan, wash-tub, pail, iron, etc. The hostess is going to take this opportunity of showing off her new electric equipment and several dishes are to be prepared at the table. On the place cards will be this quotation: "Learn to Labor and to Wait." The table centerpiece will be a huge copper bowl filled with salvia. This brilliant flower is lovely for tall decorations.

A Lawn Bridge Party.

Lawn fetes are still very popular as the warm days are still with us. A delightful bridge party was just given with ten tables scattered over the perfectly cut lawn that stretched at the front and side of the house. The entire color scheme was in yellow, the gorgeous golden glow being in evidence everywhere. The tables were covered with white, they had very narrow yellow ribbons across the corners to hold the table numbers, pencils (of yellow) and the score cards which were decorated with sunflowers. There were five prizes, all very beautiful, being a white and gold plate, a cup and saucer, sugar and creamer, and a compote in glass with gilt decorations. Refreshments were served on the card tables and consisted of orange ice in tall glasses, the stems twined with asparagus ferns; the cakes were card shaped, iced in white with the "spots" in yellow. The bon-bons were orange and lemon quarters, glazed. There were two hostesses who wore charming gowns of yellow. During the games glasses of lemonade containing slices of orange were passed on glass trays.

FANCIES OF FASHION

The hat with the big broad-spreading ribbon bow is quite popular.

One of the prettiest novelties of the season is the hatpin of Irish crochet to be worn with the dainty summer hat.

Cabochons for the evening are of mousseline de soie shirred and trimmed with rosettes of old gold or silver tissue.

Even foulard parasols are veiled with plain colored chiffon with effects that are just as good as those secured in gowns.

A Persian belt adds a smart touch to the frock of black—or old and dark blue serge and natural colored linen or pongee.

Smart, indeed, are the all-linen hats in most picturesque shapes. They are usually trimmed with loops or bows of soft ribbon.

Pumps are fashionable in one form or another in kid, suede and patent leather. The stiff pump bow is seen and the string bow also.

The pulley belt is among the new belts. It is made of elastic, finished at each end with a covered ring and fastened with a ribbon bow.

HINTS TO MOTHERS.

Greatest Care Necessary in Fitting Shoes—Cashmere Coats for Babies.

Fine twilled white pique is one of the leading materials for the small boy's best suit.

Quaint little frocks of old-fashioned figured lawns and dimities are made for tiny girls to wear on very hot days, as these materials are cooler than gingham or percale.

Many minutes spent in darning stockings might be saved the busy mother if the wee ones wore the knee protectors which are easily adjusted, comfortable to wear, and come in three materials—black jersey cloth, black leather and tan leather.

The drying frames for children's "undies" are an excellent invention, as they prevent the little garments from shrinking and they dry in shape, which makes them easier to put on.

Even in the summer a very small babe needs a warm coat when he goes for his morning airing. A material that is very light weight, but just warm enough to give the necessary protection is the thing to get, and soft white cashmere answers admirably. The coats are usually made slightly flared on to a yoke, with long skirt, bishop sleeves and a cape, prettily embroidered in white and scalloped on the edge. Sometime the coat, or just the cape, is lined with white, pink or blue china silk.

The importance of having the children's shoes carefully and wisely fitted cannot be overestimated. The idea that any shoe will do so long as it is about the right size is far too prevalent. Children's feet often need individual attention, and many of the foot ills so common among grown-ups might have been avoided had the feet been properly looked after in the early stages of childhood. The leather in children's shoes should be soft and pliable, for at night many are the aching, tired little feet that have trotted about all day in shoes of harsh, stiff leather used in cheap shoes.

GOLDSBORO HEARD FROM

A Lady Who Lives in Goldsboro Joins in the Chorus of Praise for Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Goldsboro, N. C.—"A physician treated me for many distressing symptoms," writes Mrs. Etta A. Smith, "but gave me no relief.

"I suffered with neuralgia around the heart and was troubled at times with my head. I had pain in my left side, bowels, left thigh, shoulders and arms.

"After taking Cardui, I am now well and can recommend it to other suffering women."

Just such doubtful symptoms, as those from which Mrs. Smith suffered, are the ones for which it will pay you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is at such times, when there is nothing to show, for certain, the real cause of the trouble, that you need a tonic, to give the body strength to throw off the illness that evidently threatens.

Take Cardui, when you are ill, with the ailments of your sex. Take Cardui as a tonic, to prevent illness, when you feel it coming.

Your druggist keeps it.

Ballinger-Pinchot Committee to Meet In Chicago.

A PARLIAMENTARY TANGLE

With One Faction Refusing to Have Anything to Do With the Other, and Both Apparently Determined to Sit Tight, Chairman Nelson Faces a Problem in Trying to Get His Committee Together.

Minneapolis, Sept. 10.—The Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee adjourned upon declaration by Senator Knute Nelson to meet in Chicago at 9 a. m., Tuesday. His ruling followed a long parliamentary tangle. The Republican members, Sutherland, Denby and McCall, refused to come into the meeting, and Senator Nelson, as chairman, had ruled that the only motions he could entertain would be one to adjourn and another to take steps to bring the committee together.

The Democrats say they will not attend the Chicago session, and that so far as they are concerned the committee is still in session and they will give out their report here.

The two opposing forces held their places, the insurgent members, including Sutherland of Utah, Denby of Michigan and McCall of Massachusetts, in Room 322 of the West hotel, while the Democratic members, reinforced by Congressman Madison of Kansas, with Chairman Nelson, held their meeting on the parlor floor. Sutherland, Denby and Olmstead absolutely refused to have anything to do with the other members.

FERRY GOES DOWN

Disaster on Lake Michigan Claims
Twenty-Six Lives.

Ludington, Mich., Sept. 10.—The car ferry Pere Marquette No. 18, flagship of a fleet of six steel car ferries owned and operated by the Pere Marquette Railroad company, sank to the bottom of Lake Michigan thirty miles off Port Washington, Wis., with a loss of twenty-six lives. The boat, which sank in 300 to 400 feet of water, was valued at $400,000 and the cargo, which included twenty-nine loaded cars, at $100,000 to $150,000. The total loss will exceed half a million dollars. The vessel carried a crew of fifty, of whom the Ferry No. 17 picked up twenty-four survivors.

LLOYD W. BOWERS

Federal Solicitor General
Dead After Brief Illness.

SOLICITOR GENERAL'S WORK WAS THOROUGH

How the Late Lloyd W. Bowers
Stuck to Duty.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Some indication of the way in which Solicitor General Lloyd W. Bowers, who died of pneumonia in Boston Friday, performed his duty may be obtained from the fact that when he left Washington on July 9 for his summer vacation he took with him the papers in twenty-three cases to which the government was a party. He intended to put in his spare time working on those cases at the law library at Salem, Mass., near Boston and, according to advices here, had done so faithfully until he became ill.

The death of the solicitor general caused a distinct shock to government officials in Washington. Flags on government buildings were put at half mast and in other ways those who knew him showed their appreciation.

Mr. Bowers became solicitor general of the United States at the age of fifty. It is on record that since he occupied that office the government has never lost a case which he has argued, and he has figured in many. Mr. Bowers was born at Springfield, Mass., in 1859. His education was obtained at Yale and he laid the foundation of his legal lore at Columbia university law school. He became general counsel for the Chicago & Northwestern railway in 1893, and was appointed solicitor general shortly after Mr. Taft's inauguration. Mr. Bowers was married twice.

Boston, Sept. 10.—There were genuine groans of regret from the Boston admirers of Claude Grahame-White at the Quantum aviation meet when the English aviator smashed his machine while attempting to make a landing. The aviator escaped uninjured, but his propeller was hopelessly smashed, the chassis badly wrecked and the upper and lower right wings were crumpled up.

EGG PROBLEM A DIFFICULT ONE

On Whom Shall Rest the Burden of the Bad Egg?

STATES SEEKING A SOLUTION

Indiana Is Not Alone in Campaign That Is Being Waged Against the Passe Egg—Reports From Other Food Inspectors to Indiana's Food and Drug Commissioner Show Something of Struggle Being Made in Other States.

Indianapolis, Sept. 10.—That Indiana is not alone in the campaign against the circulation of the bad egg in the general market is evident from the flood of replies received by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, in answer to requests for information recently sent out to the food commissions of the great egg-producing states. All the states in the "egg belt" realize that they have a serious problem, but from this point their ways diverge. One group reports little or no success in handling the question, while the other, including Kansas, South Dakota and Missouri, seems to be on the way to a solution of the difficulties that beset the food reformers.

From the character of the replies Mr. Barnard hopes to gain valuable data in pursuing the movement to amend the Indiana law, which, by means of the word "knowingly" in the egg clause, makes it almost impossible to push prosecution to successful issue. The conditions vary, however, in each state according to the variance in the local laws and the vigilance of the food commissioners.

Among the states that are still unsuccessful in handling the egg question the situation ranges all the way from a mere seeking of light to a realization of the obstructions after thorough investigation. J. Q. Emery, at the head of the dairy and food commission in Wisconsin, writes: "We have not solved this problem. We have not done much work along this line owing to the extreme difficulty involved in the case. It seems to me that when we do strike we shall be obliged to hold the person responsible who is caught with the goods."

Iowa has been a little more successful by prosecuting under a general law. W. B. Barney, state food and dairy commissioner, writes: "We, too, have found the egg problem one of the most difficult to handle." Renick W. Dunlap, dairy and food commissioner of Ohio, finds it "a very difficult matter to determine who should be held responsible for bad eggs found on the market." North Dakota, through its food commissioner, E. F. Ladd, says: "We have sent out a warning to the dealers against handling eggs that were not perfectly fresh without due notice to the purchaser."

Kansas leads the fight against the spoiled egg. The campaign has been carried on there with more consistency and more success than in any other state. Posters of warning a foot wide and nearly two feet long have been scattered throughout the groceries and retail stores where eggs are sold.

S. J. Crumline, secretary of the Kansas state board of health, writes: "We have made an attempt in this state to eliminate the bad egg at the point where it should be, namely, upon the first sale by the farmer to the dealer." The Kansas idea has spread throughout the great western corn belt. W. P. Cutler, M. D., commissioner of food and drug inspection in Missouri, says: "According to reports the egg situation in this state has already improved over 100 per cent."

BUSINESS INCREASES

Express Companies Note the Effect of Southern Prohibition.

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 10.—Local express companies report an increase of 25 per cent in their business as compared with this time last year. The increase in business is due to the large shipments of whisky and beer from this city into Georgia, Tennessee and other southern states that are now "dry" territory. One express manager said his company shipped as high as a car of whisky a day from here. Since several of the southern states have passed prohibition laws Evansville has become quite a whisky center.

Engineer Jumps and Is Injured.
Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 10.—The tracks of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad were blocked eight hours as the result of a wreck at Howe. A northbound passenger train crashed into a freight which had failed to get into a siding in time to avoid the accident. M. F. Garrison, engineer, of this city, was injured in jumping from his cab. The locomotive and several freight cars were badly damaged.

Methodist Missionary Meeting.
Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 10.—Arrangements are being made by the women of the Methodist churches of the city for the entertainment of eight hundred visitors October 11, 13, at the annual convention of the northwestern branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church. The states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Indiana will be represented.

ZOO GOSSIP - OR HOW THE ELEPHANT GOT HIS TRUNK

WAS A TIME WHEN THE OLD FAMILIAR ELEPHANT HAD A MOST GROTESQUE APPEARANCE AS HE HAD NO MEAT ON HIS LEGS AND BODY WERE SO THIN THAT THE OTHER ANIMALS MADE FUN OF HIM.

ONE DAY HE MET AN ENORMOUSLY FAT SPRINGBUCK, WHICH SURPRISED THE ELEPHANT AS HE KNEW THEM TO BE QUITE SLIM AND GRACEFUL. HE THEREFORE ASKED HIM HOW HE GOT SO CORPULENT.

"A FEW MONTHS PAST," REPLIED THE "FAT BUCK." "I WAS VERY SICK AND AN OLD PELICAN ADVISED ME TO BATHE IN A CERTAIN SMOKING SPRING. THE BATHING CURED MY SICKNESS, BUT LEFT ME IN THIS FATTENED CONDITION."

THE ELEPHANT SOUGHT IT THAT HE MIGHT IMPROVE HIS APPEARANCE. THE STEAM FROM THE SPRING MADE HIM THINK OF A BATH. SO HE MERELY TOUCHED HIS SNOUT TO IT AND DRANK THE WATER, WHICH HE FOUND VERY GOOD.

HE HAD BEEN DRINKING FROM THIS SPRING FOR SEVERAL DAYS WHEN HE NOTICED THAT HIS NOSE, THE ONLY PART THAT TOUCHED THE SMOKY WATER, WAS GROWING VERY LONG, WHICH MADE HIM FLEE FROM THE SPRING IN TERROR.

HIS LONG NOSE THEN GREW STRONG AND FLEXIBLE, ENABLING HIM TO TEAR UP GREAT TREES BY THE ROOTS AND IT BECAME A DEFENSIVE WEAPON WHICH MADE HIM A TERROR AMONG THE OTHER ANIMALS. THIS LONG NOSE IS NOW COMMONLY CALLED HIS "TRUNK."
